FOREWORD

REPEATED requests for a general history of the Seaman family in America has led to the presentation of the present volume.

It makes mention of different families bearing the same name who made separate settlements in America, but deals specially with the establishment of the Long Island family by Captain John Seaman of Hempstead.

Grateful appreciation is extended to the many descendants who have given so generously of their contributions and support; to Mrs. Frank Haviland for the privilege of including the valuable manuscript of herself and her husband, now in the possession of The Long Island Historical Society of Brooklyn; to The Long Island Historical Society itself for its exhaustless resources and untiring assistance; and to the many interested friends and well-wishers; to all of whom the name of Captain John has acted like the magic key that unlocked the chest of hidden treasure.

Regret is expressed for the absence of such names as could not be included, and for fuller records of early days which have been lost to history.

The book goes forth to the many descendants of Captain John with the earnest hope that the trail blazed by his dauntless courage and noble example may be kept clear and open by all succeeding generations.

HISTORIC LEGEND

The Seaman family was originally Danish. In old Norse times the members of families banded together, and sailed the wide seas over in their ships of beauty, getting what they might and holding what they could. On one of their excursions they landed off the eastern coast of England, whipped the natives and held the land. They remained in possession until subdued by the Norman Conqueror, 1066. They passed under the name of "Sea Men" (men of the sea). One of these leaders joined the Crusaders in the Third Crusade, 1187, under Richard Coeur de Lion, gained renown in the Holy Land, and on his return from Jerusalem was knighted by the king and given a Coat-of-Arms and a Crest. This Coat-of-Arms and Crest consists of a shield crossed by wavy bars of azure and gold, emblazoned with a Crescent and surmounted with a Crest, a demi sea horse, arising out of the Crescent. The wavy bars of azure and gold and the sea horse represent the sea or calling of the family. The crescent represents the part taken in the Crusade.

EARLY HISTORY

The Ancient Paternal Arms of the Old and Historic of Seaman's, as described in the Dictionary of Heraldry, or General Armory, of all Armorial Bearings, from the earliest to the present time, by Sir Bernard Burke, LL.D., King-at-Arms, etc., etc., are as follows:

Barry wavey of six argent, and azure, a crescent or.

Crests—a demi sea-horse salient argent.

The arms of the Seamans of London of later grant, are Barry wavy of six argent and azure, per bend counter changed, over all a Crescent Erminois. Crest out of a Crescent Erminois, a demi-sea-horse, barry wavy of six argent, and azure.

Argent—silver.

Azure—the color of this name.

Erminois—THE FEW THUS CALLED.

Or—Gold.

SIGNIFICATIONS OF THE QUARTERINGS CREST, ETC., OF THE SEAMAN COAT OF ARMS.

Barry wavy, i.e., composed waved bars or wavey lines Guillim says "They may put us in mind that as in a tempestuous storm, one wave succeeds high above the other in immediate succession, so God has ordained one trouble should succeed another, to keep his chosen in continual exercise, and that His faithful may have manifold experience of His great providence, and Fatherly care in preserving them in all their troubles, giving them a comfortable event, and happy end in all their afflictions." As an example of the symbolic bearing of the wavy bars or fez (fess), we read that Sir Francis Drake had granted to him on a black shield, a Fess wavy, between two polestars—the Arctic and Antarctic—all colored silver on white (vide page 46 of the Symbolismus of Heraldry)—a treatise on the meaning and derivations of family armorial bearings, etc., by W. Cecel Wade.

The following bearings were imported into Heraldry as tokens of the Crusades (and Crusaders), commenced almost simultaneously with the rise of heraldry itself; namely crosses of various kinds, Crescents, Pilgrims, staves, escallop schell, which were the ancient badges of pilgrims, bezants, or coins of gold; amulets, or rings, swords, battle-axes and arrow heads. (Vide Wade—page 19.)

The Sea-Horse is indicative of the ancient Norse origin of a family, and is only borne on the Coat Armor of those whose lineage has been positively traced to Old Norse parent strains.

From the preceding explanations from unquestionable and universally recognized authorities; as also what is set forth as to the origin of the family name, the ancient lineage of this family is clearly shown, as also the antiquity of the Coat of Arms.

In the Sea-horse we have the concretion of its old Norse origin, and in the Crescent the evidence of a Sir Knight Crusader of the Seaman name.

Taking only the Crescent in the Seaman Coat of Arms, we have the proof of its beginning in the period of the Crusader.

The later addition of the Sea-horse indicates that the Lineage was traced still further back—to the very ancient days of the Norsemen.

DOOMSDAY BOOK.

By common consent allowed to be the greatest and remarkable National Record in Europe, was compiled by Commissioners appointed by in 1085, and was completed in 1086. It is a faithful summary of all the lands of his Realm (three or four northern counties excepted), and contains the names of their proprietors. In this compilation we find the name of this family, and who, as we have learned from Lowe's (Vide Patronymica Britannica), held lands in Surrey before the making of that record, thus showing it to have been already at the very early period of English History, of prominence and influence and possessed of domains, manors, and other forms of the properties of that time.

As has been shown in the quotations from Lowe's Patronymica Britannica, the name of this family is in the favored list of original Knights, and holders of Desmesnes, and from Bardsley we learn of the name being in the Hundred Rolls, and also in the Placitorum in Dom. Cap. Westminster, or records of Westminster.

They are also in the ancient records and wills of Parliament.

A brief account of their historic records is of interest and of value, for the clearer understanding of what is set forth in this compilation.

The celebrated compilation known as the DOOMSDAY BOOK.

SEAMAN.

In the DOOMSDAY BOOK of Surrey there is a Seaman who held lands before the making of that record—Old Anglo Saxon, Saemann (Vide Lowe's Patronymica Britannica).

SEAMAN.

SEAMAN le Baylief.

SEAMAN, Carpenter.

SEAMOND, Champagne.

The first is mentioned in the Placitorum, in Doom, Cap, Westminister (Vide Bardsley). Our Seamans though apparently in occupation, are not so in reality—as a Christian name the term is found in such designations as, Seaman de Champagne, or Semanus le Clerk, etc. Vide page 23 of Bardsley.

SEAMAN.

Dutch—Seeman a personal name (Vide Baiber).

THE ROTULI HUNDREDORUM.

Or Hundred Rolls of 1273, is another of the valuable and absolutely authentic records of that period. Its history is also of interest—"en re" the Seaman family.

King Edward I, on his return from Palestine, after the death of his father Henry III, caused inquiries to be made into the state of the Desmesnes, and rights and revenues of the Crown, many of which, during the previous turbulent reign, had been usurped both by the Clergy and the Laity.

The inquisitions being made upon the oaths of a jury of each hundred throughout the Realm, this mass of documents is appropriately called or HUNDRED ROLLS. In these Rolls, as has already been said, as also in the equally famous "Indicies Nominum," or index of names of the Hundred Rolls, and also in the celebrated "Coley Dyplomatica Saxonicea Alvi," or Saxon Chronicles and Charters, we find more or less mention of the Seamans.

"INDICES NOMINICUM" contain references to about 70,000 names.

The period in which the Rolls were drawn up was one when family names which had been gradually coming into use for nearly two centuries had become general among all classes of persons—which prevailed in later centuries—though almost every individual mentioned in these records bears a surname of some kind.

Some of these surnames are in Latin, some in French, some in Old English, and so on, and consequently the same person's name is written in two or three languages, with twice that number of Orthographies.

We also find one and the same tenant called by different forms of the name, in different places in one and the same ROLL or record.

This in brief explains the "vagaries" of family names then and also even at this day and period .

ORIGIN OF NAME

"Simmonds — Simmons — Simonds — Simons — Symonds—Symons. This name in its various forms has evidently two origins. Generally it would seem to be derived from Simon, a name of Norman introduction and represented by Simund in Doomsday: but there is much to support the opinion of Mr. Lower that it is in not a few cases a corruption of Seaman, which, as Seman, is very common in the records of the Cinq Ports, and other places on the coasts of Kent and Sussex. The instance is adduced by him of a Sussex family of Simmons resident at Seaford for three and a half centuries, in which we can trace all the changes of the name from Seaman and Seman, its earliest forms in the sixteenth century, to Simmons, as it is now spelt: they are as follows:—

Seaman, Seamen, Seamans, Semons, Simonds, Symonds, Simmonds, Symonds, Simmons.

It is also remarkable that at the present day Seaman is a name mostly restricted to Norfolk and Suffolk, in which two counties Symonds is also well represented.

The several varieties of the name arrange themselves readily into two groups, Simmonds and Simmons, being most numerous in Cornwall and Sussex, and afterwards in Bucks, Oxfordshire, Berks and some of the adjacent counties; whilst Simons, Symons, Symonds, etc., have their great home in Cornwall; but are also fairly numerous in Devon, Dorset, Cambridgeshire, Suffolk and in some of the neighboring counties. The localities of the various forms of the two groups are noticed in the alphabetical list.

When we come to consider the combined distribution of all the forms, we find that this name is essentially characteristic of the southern half of England and especially of the coast countries. It has three centres; the principal being in the southwest in Cornwall, the second being in Sussex, the third in Suffolk and Cambridgeshire, from which centres it has spread to the counties adjacent."

"Furgerson's Names and the Name system has Seaman from the Gothic, Old Norse, Old High German and Anglo-Saxon. Fac (Sa) English Se or Sea, and man (manus, hero).

Old German (7th Century) Sa, Saman, etc.

Old English (9th Century) Seman, Seaman, etc."

"The name was spelled Seaman, Symonds and Simmons with the variations usual to the times. When spelled Symonds, it was pronounced Simmons. In Old English the word Symond stood for Seaman. In the ancient records of Norfolk County, England, both forms of spelling were used."

"Seaman; In Sussex and Kent and probably in other counties, the name has been corrupted into Simmonds; in the Doomsday Book of Survey there is a Seman who held lands before the making of that record."

In the History of the Crusaders, the first printed book published in Frankfort, Germany, in 1548, mention is made several times of a Sir Knight Crusader Johannus Seman of the English Contingent, of the first Crusade, A.D. 1096.

In de Joinvilles Chronicles of the Crusades (English Edition 1892) there is a Messieur Jean de Semon.

"The English Knight bore on his surcoat three bars and a crescent."

In the New Haven Records of 1646 we find that Captain John Seaman (later of Hempstead, Long Island) bore arms with a demi-seahorse for crest.

Different Families of Seaman in America

The Seaman Family who moved from England to Holland about 1605, and remained there for seventy-five years before emigrating to America in 1680. Arriving in America, they moved west into Pennsylvania, west into Ohio and then west into Missouri.

The Seaman Family who originated in the Palatinate, emigrated to America, and settled in Pennsylvania.

The Seaman Family who emigrated from Havre, France, by the name of Simone. When the family came to this country the French pronunciation of the name was lost, and it was anglicized as Seaman, which, for convenience sake, they generally adopted.

The Seaman Families coming directly from England included three distinct lines:

Those who went to Delaware Bay, Maryland and Virginia, and later, for reasons of political and religious dissensions, were banished to the Barbadoes and still later returned to New England.

> "A list of what TICQ^{tts} have been granted out of the Secy^{ts} Office of the Island aforesaid for the departure off this Island of the several psones hereafter menconed beginning in January 1678, and ending in December following, 'September the 22^{d} 1679,—Seaman, Thomas in the Ship Thomas and Sarah for London, James Day Comander time out"

Those who went to Swansea, Massachusetts, and were sometimes called Simmons.

And those who came from Essex, Old England, to New England, moved through Massachusetts, Connecticut and New York to Long Island, where they settled at Hempstead, and from there spread throughout almost all regions of what is now the United States of America, and into Nova Scotia and New Brunswick. "Three brothers came over, one went back, and two remained." Of these two who remained one was Captain John Seaman, the pioneer settled on Long Island.

First Generation

"NOWHERE was a race of purer English descent than in the plains of Hempstead," writes Martha Bockée Flint in her history of Early Long Island.

The Progenitor of the Seaman Family on Long Island:

1. CAPTAIN JOHN SEAMAN, was born in Essex, England, between 1603 and 1610, came to America in 1630 with the Winthrop fleet of ten vessels, nine hundred immigrants, and died early in 1695 in Hempstead, Long Island. His will is dated August 5, 1694, and was proved March 20, 1695.

In 1631 and 1632, John Seaman, Thomas Moore, William Cooper, John Underhill and others were co-operating with Captain John Mason, John Winthrop and Sir Richard Saltoustall, in the efforts to effect settlements in New Hampshire, and these colonization efforts not being successful, we next find all of these, a little later on, in Connecticut and Long Island.

They were not Pilgrims, but were a Puritanic section still adhering to the Church of England.

Captain John Seaman and others went from their first landing to Watertown, Massachusetts, which they left to escape the imposition of a tax, which the Massachusetts Bay Colony proposed to levy on all the settlers for the purpose of fortifying Newtown (now Cambridge). From Watertown they went to Weathersfield, Connecticut, where they stayed but a short time, having some dissensions concerning church matters. In 1636 John Seaman owned two acres of land at Wrights Island in Weathersfield.

In the Catalogue of Puritanic settlers of Connecticut we find it recorded: "John Seaman, one of the original purchasers of the town of Stamford, where he settled in 1641. It is supposed he moved from Weatherfield to Stamford." The settlers at New Haven who had no charter had purchased property in various places, among them being what is now called Stamford, Connecticut, and an arrangement was then made with these discontented settlers of Weathersfield and the settlement at New Haven, by which the Colony from Weathersfield obtained right to settle Stamford, then called Rippowam. The list of these settlers included the name of John Seaman, the purchase price being one hundred bushels of corn, and John Seaman obtained six acres.

> "From Roxbury, Massachusetts, he (John Carman) went to Weathersfield, Connecticut, and thence in company with John Seaman, whose ancestors were also burned at the stake in England."

John Seaman owned land in Salem, Mass., in 1643.

In 1646 John Seaman and his brother Caleb are recorded in New Haven, Conn. At this period came the Pequod Indian War, and Captain John Mason was given chief command (as Major) of the Connecticut Troops. To John Seaman he gave command of one of the Companies, and John Strickland (who later became his father-in-law) was lieutenant of John Seaman's company. Hence John Seaman's title of Captain. The histories of the day record "John Seaman, later of Hempstead, Long Island, bore arms with demi-seahorse for crest." Another record states that on October 6, 1646, Caleb Seaman was fined 10 shillings for not carrying arms, and on November 3, 1646, "Caleb Seaman desired his fine might be remitted for defect of arms, he going shortly for England. Upon his request it was remitted provided he goe for England."

Captain John Seaman was one of the sixty-two original signers (in Connecticut) of the Hempstead compact of land, and in 1647 we find him settled in Hempstead, Long Island, where he became one of the most prominent men for half a century "and has left such a host of descendants as to be remarkable, genealogically."

The Town Records of Hempstead, Long Island, state:

> "It seems probable that in the previous year Captain John Seaman coming from the eastern end of the island, had settled land adjoining what was subsequently the eastern boundary of the Hempstead Purchase, and had secured title to a tract comprising more than twelve thousand acres, which, in 1685, under the Dongan patent, became part of the town of Hempstead."

From that time on we find his name in many pages of history, recording a life of ceaseless activity in the establishment of this section of America.

> "Once he signed an agreement or pledged his faith he never disclaimed his share of it."

In a Provincial Convention called in New Amsterdam, by writ of Governor Stuyvesant, December 11, 1653, John Seaman and William Washburne were Representatives. December 21, 1656, John Seaman and Richard Gildersleeve were nominated by Governor Stuyvesant.

> "March the 17th, 1657, Stylo Novo. Chosen by the towne of Hempsteed for townsmen for the abovesaid yeare ffrancis Weeckes, richard brutnall, richard vallingtyne, robert bedille, Addam Mott.

July 17, 1657, Governor Stuyvesant visited Hempstead, and a few days later, July 25th, John Seaman was again sent to the Governor by the town on errands of peace. March, 1658, John Seaman, and others were sent by the town in concert with Chekanow, an Indian representative of the Montauk Sachem and other Indians, to lay out bounds of the town to be known by marked trees, and to "continue forever." "Mr. Seaman was allowed 8 s. for two days travel in laying out the bounderies." In 1658 he had 20 gates (lengths) of common fence to make, 30 cattle, 15 cows, 43 acres of meadow.

February 1659 "Mr. John Seaman was allowed a bounty of £2 for killing two wolves. For many years a bounty of 20 s to 25 s each was paid by the town of Hempstead for killing wolves." "This may sartyfi that the constable hath satisfied for the woulfs two to two indians and one to Captain John Seaman twenty shilens for ech woulfe." In 1664 John Seaman was again appointed by the town on a Commission about the bounds, and was often subsequently employed in like service.

In 1665 he became Captain of Queens County Troop of Province of New York. October 2, 1665, Captain John Seaman served on a Grand Jury at Hempstead in a charge of witchcraft, "but—let it be recorded to the credit of John Seaman—the accused was not convicted." In 1666 the Village of Jerusalem in the Town of Hempstead, was settled by Captain John Seaman and his six sons, to whom a special patent was granted by Governor Nichols, for a considerable tract of land which had previously been purchased by them from the Meroke tribe of Indians. It is recorded that its location was pleasant and its population about 150. May 1669, Thomas Rushmore was ordered to give up to Captain John Seaman the colors he received from the Governor. In 1668 and 1669 assessment upon land holders shows Captain Seaman was one of the largest landowners, his payment being £4, 3s., 4 p.

From Land Papers

> "March 6, 1668
> Confirmation on L.I. from Gov. Nicolls to John Hicks, John Seaman, Richard Gildersleeve and others, freeholders of ye said town"

Six of his sons also held land under the new patent. July 3, 1671, he was sent by the town to New York to treat with the Governor about the east bounds. August 1673, Schepen for Hempstead. May 14, 1674 appointed to hold Court with the Scout at Jamaica.

> "At a Jeneral townd Meting Held in Hempstead the 14 day of May in the yeare 1674 Captain John Semans was elected an chosen by the Ma Jer Vot to be a committee to keepe Cort with the Scout at Jemaco.

"Hempsted July the 4th 1670, at a Cort of constable and overseers by his magis atorite and our Honnound govenours apoyntement under his Royal hines the duck Captain John Seaman plaintive enters an action against Joseph Genens defendant, an action of trepass upon the case."

He became a member of the Society of Friends before 1686.

"May 26, 1679, Governor Andros in his attempt to dictate religious services, having ordered R. Gildersleeve to prevent Quaker Meetings, was informed by R. Gildersleeve that Captain John Seaman, though forewarned, had a very great meeting at his house the last Lord's day! In this Mr. Seaman took an exact line which he could defend: for a man has a right to use his house as his castle, and could not legally be deprived of this use, even for public accommodation, without just compensation. He could have all his children at home and hear one of them read or speak. He was not bound to exclude visitors, but had a right to exclude spies. There was no indication of religious adherence by him to Friends before this. He defended his own rights in protecting them from wrong."

"Att a tound meeting in hempsted in October the 9, 1684 there was chosen by majer vote Mr. Seman; left. March 1, 1665, A convention was held at Hempstead under authority of the English Governor. John Underhill represented Oyster Bay and John Seaman, Hempstead.

"On the ground south of the Bowling Green Park, New York City, on which the U. S. Custom House has just been completed, in 1683 stood a large roomy three story building. Use Governor's House. In one of the spacious drawing rooms on the first floor an event occurred of the greatest interest.

In that year the English Governor, Thomas Dongan, a broad and liberal executive (subsequently Earl Limerick) issued a call for the Election of delegates (to be selected from the leading men of the Colony) to meet at his house in the Fort to arrange the first Council and Executive Assembly in the history of New York, and in that drawing room looking out upon the old Dutch Church and the barracks of the Redcoats of Britain, this Assembly met and enacted the famous providing for religious freedom, liberty of choice in Elections, and no Taxation without Representation, an event of prophetic significance.

Charter of Liberties

Among the Delegates and also one of the Committee which formulated the Charter was Captain John Seaman, who defied another Governor in upholding religious freedom, and gave shelter and protection to the persecuted believers in the principles of the Society of Friends".

Captain John Seaman was twice married.

He married first in 1644, Elizabeth Strickland, daughter of John and Jane Strickland of Charlestown, Mass. John Strickland had come to America with the first party of "Bay Coherts" to Salem in 1629, took possession of Charlestown and vicinity in 1630, and was made Freeman in May, 1631. John Strickland and all his family except one son (Thwaite) came to Long Island after 1646, and were among the early settlers of note in that vicinity.

Captain John and Elizabeth (Strickland) Seaman had four sons and one daughter:—

+2. John Seaman, Jr., born about 1645; died about 1697; married Hannah Williams.

+3. Jonathan Seaman, born about 1647; married Jane ——.

+4. Benjamin Seaman (called Simmons), born 1649 or 1650; died 1733; married Martha Titus, daughter of Edmond and Martha (Washburne) Titus. (She was born January, 1663.)

+5. Solomon Seaman (called Simmons), born about 1651; died 1733; married before 1682, Elizabeth Linnington, daughter of Henry and Katherine (Ellison) Linnington.

6. Elizabeth Seaman, born about 1653; married Colonel John Jackson, son of Robert and Agnes (Washburne) Jackson. (He was born between 1645 and 1650; died 1724 or 1725). Colonel John Jackson was a prominent public man, and one of the first settlers of Jerusalem, L. I. Member of Assembly, January 11, 1664; Member Commission to Governor Stuyvesant, 1685; Pattentee of land, 1687; Captain of Queens Troops in expedition to Albany, July 9, 1689; Juryman, 1691 to 1695; High Sheriff of Queens County, 1693 to 1709 and 1710 to 1716; Representative from Queens County to Colonial Legislature, 1699; Justice of the Peace of Queens County, 1700; Lieutenant Colonel, 1701; Colonel, December 30, 1701; Member of Protestant Petition to King William III, 1703; Commissioner of Highways, 1710 to 1723; Judge of Queens County. They had eight children, of whom seven are on the census list of 1698:

Samuel Jackson, married, first, Ruth Smith; married, second, Abigail Seaman (67), daughter of Thomas and Mary Seaman, and had eight children.

John Jackson, married Elizabeth Hallett, daughter of Samuel and Bridget (Blackwell) Hallett, and had seven children.

James Jackson, married 1694, Rebecca Hallett, daughter of William Hallett of Halletts Cove. They settled at Rockaway in the Town of Flushing, and had twenty-one children.

Elizabeth Jackson, married Charles Doughty.

Martha Jackson, married Peter Titus.

Sarah Jackson, married Joshua Barnes.

Mary Jackson, married Jeremiah Scott.

Hannah Jackson, married Richard Seaman (65), son of Thomas and Mary Seaman.

Captain John Seaman married, second, 1655, Martha Moore, daughter of Thomas and Martha (Youngs) Moore, of Southold, L. I. (She was born in England; baptised in Salem, Mass., October 21, 1639; died 1698.) They had four sons and seven daughters:—

+7. Samuel Seaman, born 1668; died 1732; married 1695, Phoebe Hicks, daughter of Thomas and Mary (Doughty)

Hicks, of Suffolk County, L. I. (She was born 1672; died 1732.)

+8. Thomas Seaman, died 1724; married Mary ——.

+9. Nathaniel Seaman, died October 9, 1759; married August 9, 1695, Rachel Willis, daughter of Henry and Mary (Peace) Willis. (She died August 28, 1739.)

+10. Richard Seaman, born about 1673 in Hempstead, L. I.; died September 5, 1749, at Westbury, L. I.; married 1693/4 Jane Mott, daughter of Adam and Mary (Stillwell) Mott. (She was born 1680; died August 31, 1759.)

11. Sarah Seaman, married Lieutenant John Mott, son of Adam and Jane (Hewlett?) Mott. (He was born about 1659; died 1688.) He was taxed in 1683, and was a Freeholder in 1685, with seventy acres. They had six children:—

John Mott, Jr.

James Mott.

Sarah Mott.

Martha Mott.

Jane Mott.

Patrick Mott.

12. Martha Seaman, born 1639; died July 6, 1712; married, 1674, Nathaniel Pearsall, son of Henry and Anne Pearsall, "a man of weight and force in his community". (He died August 24, 1703.) They had "a remarkable family of twelve children," of whom eleven are recorded in the Westbury, L. I., Records:—

Nathaniel Pearsall, born January 27, 1676; died November 30, 1679.

Thomas Pearsall, born April 18, 1679; married, 1708, Sarah Underhill, daughter of John and Mary (Priar) Underhill. (She was born August 17, 1687.)

Martha Pearsall, born October 10, 1681.

Hannah Pearsall, born January 22, 1683; died April 20, 1689.

Sarah Pearsall, born January 5, 1686; married Thomas Townsend, son of John and Susannah (Hurcurt) Townsend.

Elizabeth Pearsall, born August 28, 1688; unmarried; lived in Rye, N. Y.

Hannah Pearsall, born December 14 (or April 12), 1690; died November 30, 1718.

Phoebe Pearsall, born October 20, 1693; died July 14, 1703.

Samuel Pearsall, born December 18, 1695; died December 4, 1720.

Nathaniel Pearsall, born August 11, 1699; died April 17, 1701.

Mary Pearsall, born February 20, 1703; married, 1726, Thomas Franklin.

13. Deborah Seaman, married before 1694, John Kirk of Hempstead Harbor, L. I., and had two sons:—

Arthur Kirk, married Temperance Seaman.

William Kirk, married Abigail Valentine and had two sons. "The Kirk family has produced noted men, scattered far and wide."

14. Hannah Seaman, married before 1666, John Carman, son of John and Florence (Fordham) Carman. (He was born July 8, 1633; died 1684.) John Carman, senior, came to America in the ship "Lyon" 1631, and was the progenitor of the Carman family. John and Hannah Seaman Carman had one son:—

Thomas Carman, married Mary ——.

15. Daughter, died before 1694; married Caleb Carman, of Hempstead, South.

16. Daughter, died before 1695; unmarried.

17. Mary Seaman, married Thomas Pearsall, son of Henry and Anne Pearsall. They had one son:

Henry Pearsall, born 1690; died 1750; married, 1717, Mary Titus, daughter of John and Sarah Titus.

"Of these sixteen children all but one daughter married and raised families and he had at least ninety-five grandchildren, and his descendants are very numerous."

"He settled six of his sons at Jerusalem, in the Town of Hempstead, L. I., and removed with Nathaniel and Richard to Hempstead Village. One of his grandsons, John, and his family, settled in Hempstead, and another grandson, Joseph, became the founder of a very large family at Little Egg Harbor, New Jersey. Of Jonathan's descendants, many went to Kakiak-on-Hudson, and from there to Virginia. The oldest branch of Benjamin (called Simmons) went to Staten Island. Two sons of Solomon (called Simmons) went to Maryland. Some of Samuel's family went to Suffolk County, N. Y. Most of Thomas' family lived around Jerusalem in 1800. One branch of Nathaniel's family lived at Hempstead, and one branch at Westbury, Long Island."

For a man of these accomplishments it seems superfluous to quote from early records that he was active in the affairs of Hempstead and neighborhood for nearly half a century:

"Was diligent and successful in his own business," and that "he had a well trained family."

Tribute should be paid to his two remarkable wives, who shared the hardships of the early settlers with him, brought up all of the sixteen children to maturity and usefulness, and were loved and respected in their community. To the "large gun" which protected the homes, and was mentioned in his will "for the use of all my sons." And to the undaunted spirit, tireless energy, high integrity, and loyal, faithful service of this early pioneer on American soil. He was called the Elder of Hempstead. His motto was "Let us be judged by our actions." Surely history can add its verdict that "he builded better than he knew."

Captain John Seaman died in 1695, and this account of his life can best be closed by reading in his own words, his provision for his family in his will:—

ACCOUNT OF RACHEL SEAMAN HICKS

Written in Westbury, L. I., before 1829

HENRY AND MARY WILLIS, members of the Society of Friends, from whom descended Thomas Willis, John and Henry Willis of Jericho, came from Westbury in England, about the middle of the seventeenth century, and bought a piece of land of Captain John Seaman which he had purchased of the Indians, and named it Westbury,—settled upon it, built a good framed house in 1688. Nathaniel Seaman, seventh son of Captain John Seaman, married a daughter of Henry and Mary Willis, purchased the farm, where his son Thomas and grandson Gideon Seaman lived and died, and where Rachel Hicks, daughter of the latter, now lives. He, Nathaniel Seaman, also owned the farm where Joseph Hicks (also his descendant) resides, and settled his son Samuel on it. Several years previous to his death he resided with his son Thomas, who had two sons, Simeon and Gideon, and four daughters, Anne, Hannah, Rachel and Phebe. Simeon died when a child, and Gideon had no son, but two daughters, Mary and Rachel. Mary married Richard Willits of Jericho, and left one son, the present Edward S. Willits of Westbury, who also resides on a part of the same tract of land Henry and Mary Willis bought of Captain John Seaman. Rachel married Abraham Hicks, nephew of Elias Hicks, and had five children, William, Elizabeth, Gideon, Gideon the second, Abraham, all deceased. Having a clear recollection of incidents in the life of Captain John Seaman which my father, Gideon Seaman, having received from the lips of his grandfather, Nathaniel Seaman, used to relate with great satisfaction. At the request of Jacob Seaman of Cornwall, Orange County, N. Y., I now relate from memory, believing it may be useful to the descendants of Captain John Seaman to remember the wisdom and forbearance of their ancestor, who, though it appears did not give, by will, any part of his property to his daughters, was nevertheless far in advance of his English education, in making his eight sons equal instead of giving all of his estate to his eldest. I have often heard my father say that when a youth his ancestor, John Seaman, was bound to a carpenter to learn that trade, and during his apprenticeship his master having come to a conclusion to emigrate to America, liberty was given to the apprentice to choose either to go home to his father and live with a step-mother, or come to this country with his master. Choosing the latter he came to Boston and there served out the term of his apprenticeship,—and then being left to himself to work his way as well as he could in the new world, he left Boston, and travelled on foot toward Long Island, stopping by the way to work to earn money to defray his expenses, until he arrived at the small settlement of white people, now the flourishing village of Hempstead, about 20 miles from the city of New York, and five from Westbury, where he settled, and, there is reason to believe, manifested sound judgment, energy, and perseverence, as in that day such men were sought out to fill important offices in government, surrounded as they were by eminent dangers;—he was elected or appointed Justice of the Peace, and Captain of the militia, as the following incidents show. At one time a Friend travelling as a minister came to Hempstead, probably the first that had been there, caused great excitement, and being engaged in controversy with the priest, the people, men and women, gathered around them to hear it: among them was Captain John Seaman's wife, who ran with a child in her arms. It soon became evident that the priest was overmatched by the arguments and weighty reasoning of the Friend. The people in their excitement ran to their Justice of the Peace for a warrent to take up the stranger for no other reason than that he was a Quaker, which Seaman refused to give, because, on examination, the people had to acknowledge he, the Quaker, had not broken the peace or transgressed the civil or moral law, then said Captain John Seaman, "Let him go about his business." But the people, intent on their purpose, no doubt exasperated in seeing their priest unable to sustain himself before a poor despised Quaker, went several miles to another magistrate by the name of Gildersleeve, and obtained of him a warrent, and the Friend was taken to Jamaica and imprisoned there, how long is not now known. My father used to relate this incident with great satisfaction in the feeling, and I doubt not many others of his, Captain John Seaman's numerous posterity also do, that our ancestor was clear of this cruelty and injustice.

Another incident I will preface by relating the account I heard Betty, a pious old Indian woman, give of the arrival and reception of white people here. Betty descended from one of the Long Island kings, and her retentive mind was one of those pages of history on which the Indians were in the practice of impressing whatever they wished to transmit to posterity. She lived on the south side of Long Island and for many years made my father's home her home while she bottomed chairs, and later in life begged and collected a store of food for winter. Although unlearned and unpolished in manners there was a native simplicity and dignity about her, and above all a reverence of the Great Spirit and a desire so to live as to be prepared for eternal happiness, that made her respected and receive a hearty welcome, I believe, wherever she went. In my childhood and early youth I hailed it as a season of pleasure when Betty came, and delighted to sit by her side and hear her relate circumstances of olden time. She said, and she always spoke of it with great seriousness, that when the Indians saw the first ship they ever beheld approaching these shores, they wondered what it was, were struck with awe and astonishment, and when they saw white men moving about it thought they were angels sent by the Great Spirit and received them with reverence; believing that some great event was about to occur to the inhabitants here, they felt bound to do everything requested of them. Sometimes the newcomers gave them something to drink, that looked red in a glass, which made them feel very happy for a little while and put them to sleep, and when they awoke, were told by the white men that they had conveyed to them a piece of land; they grew uneasy seeing their possessions thus taken from them. At one time a cannon was landed, and they were told it was a God and would speak and they must stand before its mouth in a straight line; they obeyed and many of them fell dead when it was fired off and uttered its thundering voice. These and similar cruelties at length roused the spirit of revenge and a desire to relieve themselves of such troublesome invaders, and being very numerous, it required great vigilence and prudence, on the part of the small number of white settlers who pursued a more humane course of treatment, to secure their own safety, than the first who arrived here did. The Indians did not seek open warfare but to take the whites by surprise when they were not looking for them. Thus when John Seaman was Captain of the militia at Hempstead, it was reported that on a certain night the Indians were coming to cut off the white people:—as they looked to their Captain for direction in this great danger, he feeling the responsibility of his position, was brought under great exercise of mind, but looking to the Almighty for council, he felt prepared to tell the inhabitants not to retire as usual, and the men to arm themselves, but gave positive orders not to fire on the Indians unless he gave the word of command. Thus they waited in intense anxiety until they heard the sound of many voices near the village. Captain John Seaman then led his little band to meet the thousands that were approaching them, and going up to the Head man or chief ordered him to stop; he did so, and Seaman asked him where they were going; he replied to Cow Neck (now Manhasset); why did they go in the night?—because it was cool; would he promise to go through the town and do no harm?—and not thinking it prudent to go on before him, walked by his side and perceived the Indian to tremble. With great firmness he restrained his own men from firing on the Indians, for he saw clearly that had they done so, they would have exasperated their invaders and would in a short time have cut off the little handful of whites without mercy. Next day on seeing the tall grass had been tramped down, it was evident the great company had separated for the purpose of one part attacking the town, and the other to come up in the rear. And it is evident Captain John Seaman did not put his trust in carnal weapon but in Omnipotence.

the sketch of a character which we think will be read with pleasure, and found worthy of imitation.

Elias Hicks was born in Rockaway, Long Island, in the year 1748. In his youth he embraced the principles of the Society of Friends, from which he never swerved. For nearly sixty years he has been an active and useful Minister of that Society, and has travelled and preached with great success in almost every state in the Union. His life was a practical illustration of the precepts he inculcated, which secured to him a weight of character and influence which few men have ever enjoyed. The cause of this may readily be discovered in his conduct.—His was the integrety that bent not before power: the purity that tampered not with polution; the boldness that feared for nothing in the cause of truth—the single-heartedness which acknowledged but one principle of action, that of truth and virtue. He possessed a warm heart, but it was tempered by sound discretion; his feelings poured in a rapid current like the course of many waters—they were vast, but they rebelled not—they were full, but they overflowed not—or if ever, at the call of nature, and in the sacred cause of truth, they burst for a season beyond their boundaries, like the waters of the Nile they nourished; they enriched—they covered; the protected: they impregnated with plenty; and when the work of protection or beneficence was ended, silently they stole into their ancient current, and flowed again with their former tranquillity. He was religious, but his religion was not that of outward ceremony; it was the heart. He had faith, but it was rational; hope, it was well founded; charity, it was real and unaffected. He was pious not because he felt it a duty to be so, but because when he looked around, and when he looked above him he found it impossible to be otherwise. He worshipped his Maker, not because he was a bigot, but because he was not a fool. Such was Elias Hicks, and as far as this earthly stage of our existence is concerned, is no more.—The sod has covered him: no monument proclaims his worth—no tablet records his virtues—they are written upon the hearts of all who knew him—they live in their remembrance, and learn to imitate what they once admired, they will live also in their actions. "Weep not for him, thou who hast read this briel recital of his excellencies, but go and do likewise."

On the 17th inst. at Jericho, L. I. Jemima, consort of Elias Hicks, in the 79th year of her age. She was born in the same house in which she died, and in which her long life was spent. On the 19th inst. her earthly remains were interred in Friends burying ground at Jericho. At the close of a large and solemn meeting, in which Elias Hicks (who was that day 81 years old) gave a feeling and interesting account of their union in the marriage covenant, in which they had lived more than 58 years in the greatest harmony and affection.

I., 1743, Elizabeth Mott, daughter of Adam and Mary (Stillwell) Mott of Staten Island, N. Y. (She was born at Westbury, 1720; died September 7, 1781, in New York City.)

Benjamin Seaman was a member of the 28th, 29th, 30th, 31st Colonial Assembly, 1756 to 1775; Surrogate 1759; County Judge 1775. "At the opening of the Revolutionary struggle he was on the side of resistance to parliamentary tyranny and was Chairman of Correspondence when war began, but later became, with his children and father-in-law, an active loyalist, and moved to Nova Scotia, at the end of the war. In 1784 they settled at Granville, Annapolis, Nova Scotia. His property on Staten Island was confiscated by an act of the New York Legislature in 1776, as was the property of his son-in-law, Colonel Christopher Billopp."

"The old Seaman homestead, at Glen Ridge (Staten Island) stood on the Fresh Kill road, just east of the road leading to Eltingville. It was originally of Dutch style of architecture, and at some time had been partially changed to that of Gothic. How many generations of the Seaman family had occupied it, we are unable to say. We know, however, that it was the home of Judge Benjamin Seaman, the last Colonial Judge of Staten Island, and that after his departure with the Loyalists in 1783, it passed to other members of the family, probably by purchase, for it was seized by the Government and sold.

Judge Seaman was the father of the second wife of Colonel Christopher Billopp. Several years ago the writer conversed with an old colored woman, whose mother, a slave in the Seaman family, had witnessed in this old house the marriage of Colonel Billopp and Jane Seaman.

The Seaman Estate was purchased in 1880, and when a new residence was erected, the old Seaman homestead was demolished. It stood on historic ground, and adjoined the church and graveyard of the "French Congregation."

They had eleven children:—

307. Mary Seaman, born 1743; married August 3, 1759, Paul Micheaux.

+308. Edmund Seaman, born 1745; died 1828; married, first, December 24, 1768, Elizabeth Zabriskie, daughter of John and Anna Zabriskie. (She died January 27, 1774.) Married, second, November 7, 1775, at Hempstead, L. I., Hester Van Ranst, daughter of Cornelius and Catherine (Cannon) Van Ranst, who died on the day of her marriage.

Colonel Christopher Billopp was a prominent resident of Staten Island with large property at Bently Manor. He was a Representative in the New York Assembly, and a public-spirited citizen, but he became a Loyalist in the Revolutionary War, and had his property on Staten Island confiscated by an act of the New York Legislature of 1776 as was also the property of his father-in-law, Benjamin Seaman. He moved to St. John, New Brunswick, where he became a man of prominence. Histories and records of the time give graphic accounts of the struggles and experiences of families in those days of which the following are quoted:—"Life-long friends pleaded with him to join the cause of independence at the commencement of the Revolution, but he chose to follow the fortunes of Royalty. He was a good citizen, a noble man, his misfortune being that he was on the losing side of a cause in which he had everything at stake." . . . "The descendants of Colonel Christopher Billopp have passed on to the fourth generation, and are now scattered throughout the Dominion of Canada and England. They are people of whom any community might be proud." Colonel Christopher Billopp was married twice, his first wife being Frances Willett. They had five children:—

CONTRIBUTIONS TO THE MEDICAL HISTORY OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK.

BY DR. JOHN SHRADY.

AN OLD TIME WORTHY.

Dr. Valentine Seaman was born in Queens County, Long Island, April 2, 1770, his father being Willet Seaman and his mother Mary Searing, also of the same county, both of whom were of Quaker parentage.

Near the close of the Revolutionary War Valentine's father went to New York and established himself as a merchant and offered many inducements to his son to join him in business, but medicine had more allurements and Dr. Benjamin Rush of Philadelphia gained a pupil.

After his graduation Dr. Valentine returned to this city and married Anna Ferris in 1794, by whom he had eleven children, three of whom are still living.

The first white child vaccinated in New York was his own son, he having lost his first child by inoculation with small-pox, was induced to visit Jenner, the result of which was that the two became fast friends throughout their lives.

Dr. Isaac Wood, now deceased, speaks of his being a most laborious practitioner, an assiduous clinical teacher, and much given to acts of benevolence.

Dr. Seaman was the first to have a class of women to instruct in the care of mid-wifery, writing a book for their instruction and guidance; this was at the Alms House in New York. He also published an account of yellow fever which prevailed in 1791 and 1800; this may yet be found in the Medical Repository. Besides being the first analyst of the waters of Saratoga and Balston Springs, he wrote an exhaustive treatise on the subject.

In 1810 and 1811 he and others formed a medical institution associated with Queens College in New Brunswick, N. J. He was an active member of the Manumission Society for the liberation of slaves and their protection. His health began to decline about a year before his death from consumption in 1817.

Their agent requested that a woman might be sent to act as matron to teach and try to elevate the minds of the women, and Martha H. Seaman was appointed as representative of the Society. She lived alone with the Winnebagoes for one year in their primitive surroundings and ignorance, finding conditions which seemed hopeless to change, but she gained their confidence and had faith in their abilities, and at the close of the year the Government reported: "Friends left the Winnebagoes self-supporting, with a large annual surplus of agricultural products for sale, a large manuel labor boarding-school with cultivated farm attached and two day school houses had been provided for them, which were filled with promising pupils of both sexes. The Indians had one hundred and five allotments of land held in severality by certificate. Their tribal government was republican and elective. They generally wore citizens clothing. Their farmers and mechanical employees were skilled and efficient Indians. The tribe was fitted and prepared for American citizenship with protection of property during one generation."

THE SEAMAN FAMILY

By GEORGE W. SEAMAN, Loveland, Colorado

Received from Jonathan Seaman, Canon City, Colorado

A brief history of the families of the house of Seaman.

"The story is here set forth as it came to me from my father, Jonathan Seaman, who died at his home two miles north of Greenville, County of Bond and state of Illinois, on the 13 January, 1868, at the age of 68 years, 11 mos and 11 days.

My Great, Great, Great, grandfather was a native of Long Island, N. Y., and was of English Ancestry. His name was Jonathan Seaman. For many generations the oldest son was named Jonathan, and Jonathan's eldest son was named Jonah, and Jonah's eldest son was named Jonathan. This custom prevailed until my generation, when the Jonahs seem to have been dropped.

My grandfather Jonathan, the first before named, when a young man of about 25 years of age, removed from Long Island, N. Y. to the Shenandoah Valley, Virginia, the fame of its fertility and general climate having been reported to him. And to reach that country he travelled through what was then known as the wilderness of Pennsylvania, going on horseback, and carrying his provisions on packhorses over the trail, there being no roads through the wilderness for wagons. On his arrival in Virginia he secured a large tract of land near the town of Winchester, Frederick County, Va. On this land he built his house, stables, barns, etc., and opened quite a large farm for that day, and had herds of cattle, sheep, hogs, etc. At the end of five years, he determined to return to Long Island and consummate a matrimonial engagement that had been entered into by and between himself and a young lady of Long Island before his removal to Virginia. When about half way through the aforesaid wilderness, he met his brother Jonah and wife moving themselves from Long Island to Virginia. The wife of Jonah was the intended of Jonathan, whom he had intended to marry on his return to Long Island. Then and there was disappointment for Jonathan, but his common sense came to his rescue, and after summing up the whole matter, said to them 'Winter is at hand and when you arrive in Virginia you must take possession of my house and farm and stock, and care for it until I get back to Virginia. If I never return you must keep it as your own, but should I return you must turn it back to me, retaining sufficient of the increase to amply repay you for all your trouble.'

In those days there were no mail facilities between Virginia and New York or if there were any, at very rare intervals. Allowing for time between mails, Jonathan had been in Virginia for five years, and his intended bride not hearing from him, she concluded that Jonathan was dead, or had gone back on her, and had accepted

Jonah who had been diligently worshiping at her shrine all the time of Jonathan's absence.

After the expiration of five or six years, Jonathan having married a wife in Long Island, returned to Virginia and requested an accounting from Jonah, and that he also return to him (Jonathan) his farm, stock, and all his belongings. * * * * * Then Jonathan made a new beginning, and prospered greatly, and became one of the greatest land owners of the day.

During the Revolutionary War my Great Grandfather was in the employ of the Colonies with a Captain's Commission in the Army, as purchasing Agent of Army supplies, and in his zeal in support of the cause of the Colonies, he advanced of his own means and credit, and took in payment Continental Script, at about its face value. After the close of the war, the independence of the Colonies having been acknowledged, the aforesaid script became worthless, nor during his lifetime was the U. S. Government able to redeem it, and finally, after his death, the Government did enact a law for redemption; but believing that it would never be redeemed, it was about all lost or destroyed. My father often spoke of this script and described it as being printed on rough coarse, thick paper, and said that there had been a bushel box full stored in the large attic room of the family house, and that when he and other grandchildren visited the grandparents, if the weather was stormy, the attic was their favorite resort as a place for their plays, and this Continental money was used by them in building paper houses and in other childlike amusements. Much of it was thus destroyed or carried off or lost. It being considered worthless, no care was taken to preserve it.

The financial embarrassment resulting from obligations assumed by Grandfather Jonathan compelled him to sacrifice most of his property to meet his obligations, and left but little of his large estate to be handed down to his heirs. There were only four children in my Great Grandfather Jonathan's family, (he was twice married) Two children born of the first wife. The older named Jonah, and the second named William, who moved to the town of Lebanon, Warren County, Ohio about the year 1808, where he engaged in business of tanning hides and manufacturing leather for the home and southern markets, and at his business he accumulated quite a valuable estate. He died in middle life, leaving two children. Thomas was the name of the eldest, the youngest a daughter whose name I have forgotten. Thomas became a physician, and in his early manhood moved to the neighborhood of Savannah, Tennessee, where, I am informed, his descendants are still living.

Of the three boys, all were Doctors, and during the War of the Rebellion were Colonels in the Rebel Army. My Grandfather Jonah moved from Virginia in 1808 to the town of Chillicothe, Ross County, Ohio, but after a lapse of about two years he moved to a farm about one mile west of Willington, Clinton County, Ohio, where he died in 1838.

My Grandmother Seaman's maiden name was Catherine Sheets, a sister of John and George Sheets of Frederick County, Virginia, who also removed to Ohio about the same time of the removal of my Grandfather to Ohio. She was also the Aunt of John Sheets of Madison, Indiana, and of William Sheets of Indianapolis, Ind., whose descendants are living in the aforesaid cities.

My Grandfather Jonah Seaman had seven sons and two girls. Their names were Jonathan, (my father) born 22 January 1799, and died on his farm two and a half miles east of the town of Greenville, Bond County, Illinois, 13 January 1868. Philip, who died of Typhoid fever and doctors in Zenia about 1833. The next son was named George, who died on his farm four miles southwest of Bellefontaine, Ohio, in 1874, aged 72 years. The "third"? named son, Lewis, born in 1804, died at his home on his farm southeast of West Liberty, Logan County, Ohio about 1877.

The fifth son was Jonah, who died in Wisconsin, date of which is not now remembered. His oldest son, Edward, is a prosperous farmer in the locality where his father lived and died. The son William lives in the state of Missouri.

The sixth son of Jonah was Joseph, and the seventh was Morgan Miles; both of these sons died in early manhood and were never married.

The oldest daughter, Susan, died in infancy. The second grew up to woman's estate, and was married to James Dakin, and lived on a farm two miles west of the town of Willington, Clinton County, Ohio. She left two children (girls). The youngest died when a child, and the eldest is living on her farm east of and adjoining the town of Sheridan, Hamilton County, Indiana, in the grass belt of the state.

My father Jonathan Seaman was six feet one inch; his shortest brother, George, was six feet standing in his stocking feet. The others were six feet two to six feet six inches in height.

I am of the opinion that our family is of English origin. The name and spelling of, both indicate that it came from their occupation, that of seafaring men or sailors of the sea, and further, in the signers of the doctrines of the Confessions of faith, known as the Westminster confession of faith of their construction of the doctrines of the Holy Bible, appears the name of Ebenezer Seaman, who was a member of the conference that framed and published the aforesaid confession of faith, as one of the signers thereto.

Since the organization of the U. S. Government, the Seaman family have given their loyal support to it, but were never Democrats of the Locofoco Jackson, Van Buren stripe. They were supporters of Washington and Hamilton theory of conducting the government of the U. S., and later were Whigs and Protective Tariff men, and were also anti-slavery in their opinions on that subject.

I have purposely omitted the children and their families of father and his brothers, for the reason that many of them are still living and know all about them as well as I do."

Dear Miss Seaman:

In reply to your letter regarding the genealogy of the Seaman family, I can only state that my grandfather John Seaman was born in Ulster County, New York, July 14, 1804, and died in North Casnovia, Mich., November 7, 1896.

His father was also named John.

In my great-grandfather's family there were eight children, five girls and three boys. The girls were Catherine, Rebecca, Marcy, Rachel and Elizabeth. The boys were Caleb, John and Jonah.

Mrs. Frank Seaman of Grant, Mich., can give you much more data than I possess.

I am of the opinion that I descended from the Long Island branch of the family, but can not give you the genealogy.

Sincerely yours,

A. E. SEAMAN.

Extracts from letter from MRS. FRANK R. SEAMAN,

"OUR FAMILY."

"An old paper was found which had written on it: John Seaman born 1765, married January 29, 1791; Rebecca born 1769; Catherine 1792; Calleb, 1794-1814; Rebecca, 1796; Marcy, 1799; Rachel, 1801; *John, 1804; Elizabeth, 1808; Jonah, 1810.

John Seaman born July 14, 1804, in Ulster County, N. Y., was our grandfather. I have the printed list of his descendants and believe I can procure the address of Jonah's son—or descendants. Calleb (or Kaleb) left a son I know nothing about.

My father-in-law told for dictation that his grandfather, John Seaman, was born near York (New York City), on the Hudson River in 1762 (my list gives this date as 1765). He had two brothers, Kaleb and (Elijah?). Both served in the Revolutionary War under General Washington and one or both went home with him after the war to his home in Virginia and we never heard of their whereabouts since. He thought his great-grandfather's name was John and that he or his father had three brothers and were born in England and settled on Long Island to North River (Hudson).

He also told me that great-grandfather John Seaman (born either 1762 or 1765) was a messenger for General Washington during Howe's invasion of New York City in 1775-76—that he carried messages to the allied generals on the North River and often supplied dainties for Washington's larder."

Miss M. T. Seaman,

Dear Miss Seaman:

Referring to your recent letter calling attention to your compilation of the Seaman genealogy, and advising me of my line of descent from Captain John, gathered from a letter to Haviland, and requesting detailed information as to our branch of the family. Four years ago I had the misfortune to meet with loss of sight and being nearly ninety-one, I find it difficult to examine my papers for particulars.

The line traced in the letter to Haviland was derived from a letter to me written many years ago by Edward H. Seaman, of New York. The descent from Joseph III was based on that letter. More recent investigation led to an entirely different conclusion and I now trace my line as follows:

Captain John I, came to America 1630; married Mary Moore (second wife).

Thomas II, born 1645; married Mary.

Thomas III, born 1670; married Hannah.

John IV, born 1695; married Priscella Wood.

Lieut. John V, born 1728; married Patience Hopkins.

John VI, born 1748; married Rhoda Westcott.

Benjamin VII, born 1786, Starkborou, Vt.; married Diana. Their children were Horace VIII, Lorenzo Dow VIII, Benjamin VIII, Diana VIII, Wealthy VIII, born 1786, all born at Pittsford, Vt. Horace VIII, 1806, married Sally Spaulding Whipple, removed to Millport, N. Y., where he spent the remainder of his life. Died 1882. He was a physician by profession. Their children were: Loraine IX, born 1828, married Samuel Parsons. Had four children, William X, Horace X, Galen X, and Uriah X. Removed to Waumego, Kans. None of them are now living.

Eliza IX, born 1831; married Samuel Coe; died ——; had one child, Susan X, born ——; married Rev. Wayne Sessions. Now resides at Eau Gallie, Florida.

Horace Warren IX, born 1834; married Dianthy King; had one daughter, Hattie X, who married Charles Newman and now resides in Elmira, N. Y. The Newmans have five children, Harry XI, residing at New York City; Asa XI, was an officer in the World War; Guy XI, also a soldier in the war; Helen XI, married, resides in New York City, and Galen XI, a graduate of Syracuse University, Class of 1927.

The fourth and last child of Dr. Horace Seaman, Galen IX Benjamin, born August 8, 1837; lawyer, graduate of Dartmouth College, 1861; married July 28, 1863, to Harriet Martin, daughter of Stoddard H. Martin, of Milwaukee. Their children are Horace Martin X, born October 1, 1864; lawyer, Colonel Fourth Wisconsin

Infantry, Spanish-American War; married Mary Mooers; no children. Reside at Milwaukee.

Lottie X, born June 19, 1867; married Andrew Apel; had two children, Harriet XI and Loraine XI. Loraine married Jack Phalen, had one child, Sally Joan XII. Reside in Minneapolis.

Sally Harriet X, born July 16, 1875; married Russell Scott Sherman. Reside in Duluth.

Galen Benjamin IX was for three years Principal of the Fifth Public School, Milwaukee, and later was Public School Commissioner, United States Assessor of Internal Revenue, member and speaker of the Wisconsin Legislature. In 1901 he removed to Daytona Beach, Florida, where he now resides. In 1889 he married Agnes Millar at Milwaukee.

Now, Miss Seaman, I fear you will not be able to make much out of the above, but I hope you will. I should really like to know if my line of descent from Thomas II, sixth son of John I, is correct. Descent from John IV, however, is authentic. I should like to be advised as to the scope and progress of your work and if you intend to publish it, and at about when.

If I can be of further service to you in any way, kindly advise me.

Sincerely yours,

GALEN B. SEAMAN,

My dear Miss Seaman:

Pardon my not replying sooner to your letter of the 5th inst.

I am enclosing a copy of our genealogical record compiled by my father some years which will give you the desired information.

My sister, Mrs. Andrew Apel, 3611 First Avenue South, Minneapolis, Minnesota, can give you more detailed information as to her children and grandchild. My father, Galen Benjamin Seaman, is still living, but has been totally blind for the past four years.

He has compiled a very complete genealogical record of the family. His address is 640 South Ridgewood Avenue, Daytona Beach, Florida.

The record of my military service is in the office of the Adjutant General, U. S. Army at Washington, D. C., and also in the office of the Adjutant General at Madison, Wisconsin.

I served as Colonel 4th Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, War with Spain.

When your book is published I will be pleased to purchase a copy.

Dear Miss Seaman:

It has been the supposition of my family that we are descendants of Capt. John Seaman, though no one has ever taken the pains to establish the fact.

My father's name was Joseph Washington, born February 24, 1835, at Jersey City.

His father's name was James. It is said that he was born on Ellis Island, July 29, 1802.

The family of which he was a part is named as follows:

Joshua, who married Susan Mills.

David, who married Sally Lazzara.

Catherine, who married Santhenstall.

John, who married Susan Cole.

Stephen, who married Jane Mills.

Isaac, who married Sarah Crane.

*James, who married Mary Cronkhite.

Eliza, who married a Mr. Measureall.

William, who married Sarah McWilliams.

Alfred, who married Ann McWilliams.

Henry, who married Mary A. Welch.

Henrietta, who married a Mr. Holmes, either Nathaniel or Matthew.

The father of James was named John and he married Joan Grummond.

The tradition is that some time after his marriage he leased Ellis Island for five years from one Elias Berges. After the expiration of that lease he leased it for ten years more. After three years of the ten on the island he was forced to leave it by the United States Government.

Probably his father's name was Joshua who was probably married twice.

Of him it is said that he was taken out of bed by the British and compelled to pilot their ship to West Point. There are some rather bloody traditions of how one of these wives defended her home during the Revolutionary War.

It is said that one of Joshua's sons, Isaac, was in charge of a squadron for the colonies on Lake Ontario, and that he died at Gibraltar.

The tradition is that his father's name was John and his father Joshua.

James Seaman above married Mary Cronkhite. Their family was as follows:

Joan Eliza, born March 16, 1823 and died in infancy.

John J., born November 30, 1824 and died in infancy.

James G., born September 18, 1826; married Harriet J. Jenny.

Cornelius W., born August 20, 1828; died in the Mexican War.

Elijah Wesley, born April 8, 1820; died when about sixteen years of age.

John Fletcher, born April 22, 1832; married Elinor Finch, then her sister, Lois.

Charles, born September 9, 1833; died in infancy.

*Joseph Washington, born February 24, 1835; married Sarah Uline.

Samuel Jackson, born May 13, 1836.

Mary Francis, born August 22, 1837; married Joseph McLoud.

Harriet Elizabeth, born November 22, 1838; married William Rhodes.

Adaline Hannah, born February 12, 1840.

Albert R., born June 26, 1841.

My grandfather, who lived to be nearly ninety-two, said that the first of our family of Seamans came from England. That is the only authority I have for thinking that it was the Capt. John Seaman whose family you are looking up, except that he thought it was the same family.

Should you conclude that his thought of the matter was right, I can give you and put you in the way of getting further details of some mentioned and information of others.

Doubtless you know of the published genealogy of the Seaman family now largely settled in Pennsylvania and originally from the Palatinate.

I shall be much interested in knowing about your work, when it is to be published and the price.

If I can be of further service, let me know.

Very sincerely yours,

WILLIAM G. SEAMAN.

My dear Miss Seaman:

I have just been spending Sunday at a cottage on the lake where Miss Jenny Seaman was staying also. She told me that you have made some study of the Seaman family and I am wondering if you can tell me anything about where my ancestor Mary Seaman comes in: born July 6, 1750 (old style); died March 9, 1814. She married Isaac Balding, who was born April 28, 1747 (old style); died October 4, 1811.

Their children were:

1. Joel, born July 18, 1777; died June 27, 1853. My great-grandfather lived at Norwich, County of Chenango, N. Y.
2. Robert, born and lived at Poughkeepsie, N. Y.; died at about twenty years of age.
3. Isaac I., born March 29, 1784, in Poughkeepsie, N. Y.; died January 20, 1861. Lived at Staatsburgh, N. Y.
4. Anne, born February 3, 1773.
5. Mary, born January 21, 1775.
6. Susan, born at Poughkeepsie; died about four years old.
7. Susan, born at Poughkeepsie; died about two years old.
8. Richard Seaman, born November 15, 1787, Poughkeepsie; died ——, 1828.
9. Phoebe Mott Balding, born August 31, 1790, Poughkeepsie.

Miss Jenny Seaman has some Motts in a record I believe you sent her, so we must be the same family.

Can you connect my Mary Seaman with the old line and tell me who her father and mother were and the ancestors back of that? Can you tell me anything about my ancestors that is interesting and important? Are any of them Revolutionary heroes or Colonial heroes? Were they mostly Quakers later? Where are my people buried?

I have old pictures of Gen. W. Tompkins of Hyde Park, Dutchess County, N. Y., son of Elias and Susan Tompkins. Very smart looking man. Also picture of Margaret Seymour, a Quakeress and I. I. Platt of Poughkeepsie. Do you know about any of them?

Yours truly,

Dear Madam:

Your letter to the Wisconsin State Bar Association has been referred to us for reply. In the Sheboygan, Wisconsin, Directory for 1924, we find that William H. Seaman's wife resided at 1006 North 6th Street, Sheboygan, and also that one of his two daughters (Arelisle). was living with her mother.

His parents were William and Arelisle (Crane) Seaman, who were pioneers of Sheboygan County. The father was born at Catskill, New York. The mother was of Puritan descent, from Massachusetts. His wife, Mrs. Mary (Peat) Seaman, was born in Albany, New York.

Dear Miss Seaman:

Your letter of April 6th has been awaiting a final reply until I might hear from a cousin of mine to whom I wrote asking if the Capt. John Seaman, of Hemsted, was related to our Uncle John Seaman, of Heubleton, N. Y., and later, of New Orleans, La.

I have not heard from my cousin, but am inclined to believe that there was no close connection between the two families.

My dear Miss Seaman:

In reply to your letter of June 5th, I am very glad to give you all I know regarding my Seaman antecedents and it is possible that from the information I can give you, you may be able to trace this farther back.

I am also still trying to get some further information and should I succeed, I shall be glad to communicate with you again.

My grandfather was Alonzo Duretto Seaman. He came to Milwaukee from New York City in 1846 and lived in Milwaukee until his death, September 19, 1868, at the age of 52. He was in the manufacturing business, manufacturing furniture, and I am told was one of the most prominent citizens in this locality. I have found some newspaper clippings at the time of his death in which he is highly eulogized.

His wife, who came to Milwaukee with him, was Mary Stewart Armstrong, daughter of William Stewart Armstrong of New York City.

They had seven children, as follows:

Mary, the oldest.

Catharine E.

William Stewart.

Letitia.

Alonzo D.

Henry C.

James L.

My father was William Stewart Seaman. He was born in Milwaukee, January 17, 1845, and died March 29, 1910. He with one of the brothers succeeded my grandfather in the furniture business.

On October 1, 1874, he married my mother, Kate Darling Hibbard of Milwaukee. Their children were:

Lauretta Alice, born October 20, 1875.

Harold Hibbard, born September 8, 1879.

Irving, born August 8, 1881.

Lauretta A. Seaman has not married.

Harold H. Seaman married Maude Eustis of New Orleans, the daughter of Cartwright Eustis of that city on April 12, 1912, and have two adopted children: William Cartwright Seaman, born March 1, 1918, and Elizabeth Seaman, born April 2, 1918.

Irving Seaman married Anne Douglas of Great Barrington, Mass., daughter of Mr. Harry Douglas of that city, on July 28, 1920. They have four sons:

Douglas, born April 27, 1921.

Irving, Jr., born July 14, 1923.

Richard, born September 22, 1925.

David P. Seaman, born May 15, 1928.

My brother and myself succeeded my father in his business, which with the advent of the automobile, developed into the manufacture of automobile bodies.

I hope this information may be of some use to you and I shall be glad to forward anything further I can obtain.

Yours very truly,

My dear Miss Seaman:

Your letter addressed to Mr. Frederick C. Seaman, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., found its way to me. I am Mrs. George Seaman, the widow of George Seaman, who passed away four years ago in June, and there is no such person by the name of Frederick C. Seaman in the family that I know of. Mr. G. S. had a cousin Fred Seaman but he has been gone a long time. My husband, Mr. George Seaman, is a descendant of Captain John Seaman of Hempstead, L. I., and is the son of Nelson Seaman, who was the son of Samuel Seaman and he was the son of Ambrose Seaman, removed from Staten Island, N. Y., 1833, and settled in Dutchess County, N. Y. My husband had the family history but it is too much for me to write, and as he is gone and we have no children, I am not interested any more.

Dear Mrs. Haviland:

* * * * * I am still working on my Sylvanus. You will remember that there were two Sylvanus S.'s in the Revolutionary Army in New York, one in Lt. Col. Baldwin's Regt. of Artificers, and one in the 4th Ulster Co. Militia. These were two different men as they were serving at the same time. The Sylvanus in Col. Baldwin's Regt. served 1777-80 and the other 1775-80. There is also mention of another Sylvanus whose personal property was sold by the Commiss. of Sequestration for Westchester County for adherence to the British. This is evidently a third Sylvanus. One of these three is my gt. gd. father.

In the First U. S. Census, 1790, there are three S. S. given: Sylv. S. of Rye, Westchester Co.; Sylv. S. of Clinton, Dutchess Co.,

and Sylv. S. of Montgomery, Ulster Co. There were three Sylv. S. in the Revolutionary period and three in 1790. Probably the Sylvanus of Rye, 1790, is the man whose property was confiscated and sold. The Sylvanus of Montgomery, 1790, is probably the one who served in the Ulster Co. Militia. Montgomery was then in Ulster Co. Therefore the Sylvanus of Clinton, 1790, must be the man who served in Lt. Col. Baldwin's Regt.

You will remember that Sylvanus S., father of Ezra, was born in Dutchess County, and Mrs. Jackson, his gd. dau., says that he lived in Clinton and he must be the Sylvanus of Clinton.

This leaves one of the other two as my Sylvanus. I wrote to the Census Bureau in Washington, and had them search the Records of the Censuses of 1800 and 1810 for the three towns, Rye, Clinton and Montgomery. There was no Sylvanus in either Montgomery or Clinton, they had both moved. But in both 1800 and 1810 there was a Sylvanus in Rye which makes it probable that he was not my Sylvanus as both my grandfather, born 1804 and his sister, born 1796, were said to be born in Ballston and therefore their parents must have already moved to B. Another fact makes it certain that Sylvanus of Rye was not my Sylvanus. The Census records for 1800 and 1810 give more family data than the 1790 Census. The records for 1800 and 1810 give the number of male children under 10 years, between 10 and 16, between 16 and 26, between 26 and 45, and those over 45. The same data is given for the females. Now in 1800 my gd. father's elder sister, Phebe, born 1796, was under ten years, but there is no female of that age given for Sylvanus of Rye. In 1810 she was 14, therefore between 10 and 16, but she does not appear in the list for Sylvanus of Rye, there being no child of that age given. Also my gd. father was born 1804, his brother, Henry 1806, and Nelson about 1808, all under 10 years in 1810 but for Sylvanus of Rye, no male children are given under 10 in 1810. Therefore I believe that this Sylvanus is not my gt. gd. father which leaves only the Sylvanus Seaman of Montgomery, as my ancestor, unless my Sylvanus is the "Silvanus Simmons" of Barnstable, Mass., Census of 1790, which I do not think probable. I believe that my Sylvanus is the man from Montgomery, and I am starting a search in around that place.

What are you doing in the genealogical line? Or are you resting? You will remember you sent me the names of four other children you believed were Sylvanus. Sarah, who married a Colwell of Dutchess Co., Mary, Jane Harvey, Phebe, John, Henry and Nelson. You were going to look them up in the Colwell Genealogy. Did you find anything? Have you or Mr. Haviland any data on other lines of the family since I last heard from you? Have you the list of children of the sons of Adam S., who was School Superintendent at Northcastle and died in Rye about 1737? Any other data about Sylvanus S., who married Rebecca Jackson and lived on Staten Id., dying there in 1759?

Cordially,

12901 Ferris Ave. S. E., W. L. SEAMAN.
Cleveland, Ohio.

Cleveland, Ohio, Sept. 12, 1911.

Mr. Frank Haviland,
34 Concord St., Holliston, Mass.

Dear Sir:

. . . . . I am working on my line as usual. I have found out that my gt. gd. father Sylvanus lived in Montgomery, New York, previous to moving to Ballston. He is given in the Census of 1790 as residing at Montgomery, which was then in Ulster County. In the Revolution there is a Silvanus Simmons who served as private, 1775-1780, in the 4th Ulster Co. Militia, Col. J. Hardenburgh. This is probably him. I neglected to state above that in the Census his name is given as Sylvanus Simmons.

I am trying to fill all lines where there is a chance that he may be connected so as to narrow the field of possibility. Have you found out anything further about Sylvanus (3), Thomas (2), who married Rebecca Jackson and died on Staten Id. 1759. I wish to get his children and gd. children. I look on him as the most likely grandfather of my Sylvanus there is, and so wish to hunt Sylvanus (3) up.

Have you anything on the children and descendants of Hicks (3) of Samuel (2). He married Elizabeth Barnes and owned a farm near the Croton Riv. about 1764.

Have you the children of Adam (4), James (4). Israel (4), Richard (4), and Samuel (4). They are the sons of Adam (3), son of Richard (2). Adam (3) married 1730, Hannah Pine and was Supervisor at Northcastle. His will is dated at Rye, Aug. 20, 1757.

. . . . Thanking you for any data you may be able to send me, I am,

Very cordially,

W. L. SEAMAN.

Dear Mrs. Haviland:

Your letter of the 26 Dec., 1908, has not been off my desk since its receipt, and I have been trying to discover some information that might be of use in unwinding the tangle with reference to the Seaman family, or rather that portion of it which is represented by the several of the name who came here with the Loyalists in 1783. I am sorry to state that I have not so far succeeded in obtaining a single bit of additional information.

I should have sent an earlier acknowledgment of your very kind and very full communication, but delayed from time to time in the hope that something might be discovered. In the meantime I am working my records up into better shape and tabulating and indexing fresh information which is so continually coming into my possession.

Richard Seaman, who was without special occupation, and is listed as a "gentleman," was one of the original Freeman of Parrtown, now the city of St. John, in 1785. This would indicate that he was a man very much above the ordinary, of good social position, and of some means financially. He was the only one of the name who was ever a Freeman of St. John.

The members of the Seaman name, who came here with the Loyalists, were the following:—

Benjamin, who is buried in the old Loyalists graveyard here.

Hicks, died at Sheffield, New Brunswick, 1841, at 84.

John, said to have settled in St. John. There are four of the name of Seaman now living in St. John, possibly his descendants.

Richard became quite prominent here, and was provincial Treasurer.

William was said to have been a grantee at Parrtown, now St. John, but I have no further word of him.

In case that you might have anything new to communicate with reference to the above, or if I can be of any assistance to you in making any research here, it would give me great pleasure to be able to do so.

My dear Miss Seaman:

Referring to your letter of May 11th relative to the genealogy of the Seaman family, I must state that my knowledge of the family is very limited, extending back only to my maternal grandparents. My mother's name was Antoinette Seaman. Her father, whom I never saw, I understand was named John Jackson Seaman, and her mother's name was Esther. There was a large family of children, possibly ten or twelve. The family lived at Wantagh, Long Island. I never heard anyone speak of relatives in Hempstead. I can only remember my mother speaking of one uncle, who was in the Civil War and later lived in Boston, Mass. His given name I do not recall, but his wife's name was Belle. His last name was Seaman. There are several of my mother's sisters and brothers still living and they can supply much more information than I can. There are two sisters and two brothers living at Freeport, Long Island. You may communicate with Mr. Sidney Seaman or Miss Emily F. Seaman, Freeport, Long Island, N. Y., who should be able to trace the family further back and also possibly supply information relative to the connection with other branches of the Seaman family on the south side of Long Island.

Yours very truly,

My dear Miss Seaman:

Mrs. Norwood being unusually occupied today, asked me to answer your letter of the twenty-second instant, received this morning.

Mrs. Norwood knows that she is not descended from Captain John Seaman. Her paternal grandfather, according to such information she has, which may or may not be entirely reliable, was a Frenchman who lived in Havre, France, and who spelled his name Simone. When the family came to this country, the French pronunciation of the name was lost and it was anglicized as Seaman, which for convenience sake they generally adopted.

Very truly yours,

Dear Miss Seaman:

I note your letter of April 6, regarding genealogy of the Seaman family.

The Seaman family we descended from apparently came over here from Holland in 1680. They moved west into Pennsylvania, west into Ohio, and then west into Missouri, where I was born. I do not know which captain we descended from.

The story in the family is that the Seamans moved from England to Holland, leaving there about seventy-five years before coming over from Holland.

Miss Mary T. Seaman,
47 Pierpont St.,
Brooklyn, N. Y.

My dear Miss Seaman:

While visiting cousins in Loveland, Colorado, this past summer, I was most happy to learn of you and your writings, and that you had perfected a family record of the Seaman family.

My mother is Anna J. Seaman, a daughter of Jonathan Seaman, and was born in Greenville, Illinois, seventy-one years ago.

Will you please let me know of your family record and whether it does make our contact clear for admission to the D. A. R.?

Most sincerely,

MAY C. BARTOS.

Rev. Kingston and Matilda Susan (Seaman) Goddard are buried in Woodland Cemetery, Philadelphia.

My dear Miss Seaman:

I have just received, from St. John, New Brunswick, a certified copy of the Will of Judge Benjamin Seaman, dated August 4th, 1785. Proved September 26th, 1785. A copy is herewith enclosed.

The children named therein, in the order of birth, agree with the list you kindly sent me, with the exception of Elizabeth, wife of Robert Stewart (whose name does not appear on list). There were apparently two daughters named Elizabeth, the first, third child, born 1747, died 1748, the second, who was the ninth child, must have been born 1759 or 1760.

John, the eighth child, was born 4-12-1758, died 10-5-1826. His wife Rebecca, born 10-15-1773, died 11-5-1845. (St. Andrew's Church Records, Richmond, Staten Island, New York.)

William, the eleventh, youngest child, was born 1763, died 12-14-1835. (New York Commercial Advertiser, December 15th, 1835.)

I have been unable to find any record of the birth, death, or marriage of Elizabeth Benson, wife of William.

Very sincerely,

E. CLAUDE GODDARD.

ERRATA

Page 78. No. 121. The date 1781 as stated of the death of Judge Benjamin Seaman is incorrect, although given in original manuscript and family records. Judge Seaman was in New York in 1783. He announced his intentions to remove to Nova Scotia, and was one of the fifty-five petitioners for grants of land in that Colony. His name appears on a Muster Roll at Granville in 1784. He is buried at St. John, New Brunswick; the inscription on his tomb gives no dates of birth or death.
